

Steck gets a pizza the German market

Steck Depositors, the successful company behind some of the celebrated innovations in the depositing industry has now made an impact on the German market by gaining valuable clients such as Dermanis Pizza.

Having already supplied nearly all the major UK pizza manufacturers with pizza sauce depositors and spreading heads, Steck has now extended its client base further still by moving into mainland Europe and beyond.

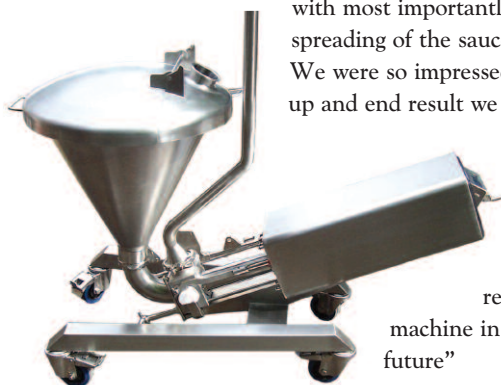

Steck's Dimension depositor isn't just known for its unique falling pin design pizza sauce spreading heads, it has also garnered attention for its power capabilities and low energy consumption that have improved production across the industry.

Dermanis is a small but rapidly expanding pizza producer and as a result had been looking to automate their sauce topping process. After searching the worldwide market for suitable machinery, Steck successfully demonstrated a machine at their site and the order was placed there and then.

Mr Dermanis the owner of Dermanis Pizza said, "We liked the compactness and versatility of the Steck machine and on the trials it gave exceptional results in terms of accuracy and speed of deposit with most importantly a superb spreading of the sauce onto our bases. We were so impressed with the rapid set up and end result we achieved, it made it easy for us to make our decision on the spot and we are looking forward to receiving the machine in the very near future"
